Introduction

A Blood Donation Camp was organized on 14 May 2026 at Parvati Nursing Home, Sendurwafa/Sakoli by Parvati Nursing Home in collaboration with Geetai Nursing Institute. The camp was conducted with the objective of creating awareness regarding the importance of blood donation and encouraging people to donate blood for saving human lives.

Blood donation is considered a noble act that helps patients during emergencies, surgeries, accidents, and various medical conditions. Nursing students actively participated in the programme and helped in spreading awareness among the community.

The programme started at 9:00 AM with the welcome of guests and participants. The medical team explained the importance and benefits of blood donation. Donors were guided regarding eligibility criteria and necessary precautions before donation.

Doctors, nursing staff, students, and local citizens enthusiastically participated in the camp. Necessary arrangements such as registration, health check-up, blood collection, and refreshment facilities were properly maintained.

Nursing students assisted the healthcare team in registration, donor care, monitoring vital signs, and maintaining cleanliness and discipline during the camp. The programme continued successfully till 2:00 PM.

The Blood Donation Camp was successfully conducted with active participation from students, staff, and local citizens. The programme helped in creating awareness about the importance of blood donation and encouraged people to contribute towards saving lives.

Conclusion

The Blood Donation Camp organized by Parvati Nursing Home and Geetai Nursing Institute was a successful and meaningful programme. It promoted humanity, social responsibility, and awareness regarding voluntary blood donation. The programme concluded with a vote of thanks to all organizers, donors, and participants.
